WHALE GRAFFITI

Native Art (West Coast)

Description:

Aboriginal Art

Aboriginal art is art made by indigenous people and is closely linked to religious ceremonies or rituals. It is an important part of the world's oldest continuous cultural tradition based on totems and the Dreaming. All the designs, painted or drawn, have a story in front of rocks.

Symbols are used in aboriginal art to show different things: While the meaning of these symbols are often shared, they can change within the same piece, and they can be different between different groups. Aboriginal art is a language in itself, communicated through beautiful patterns. This started around 30,000 to 40,000 years ago.

Where is the line between the cult of success and real positive actions? The heroine of this short film searches for an answer, reaching the edge between oblivion and the future. Meeting with the same teenager for a few moments helps her to understand and accept the true picture: What is the real value of life? What part of being are you?
